The President is paying but little personal attention at present to the question of filling the vacancy on the Supreme bench caused by the death of Justice Bradley. In fact, it may be said that he has not yet taken up the matter

Another act in the Schneider tragedy transpired this afternoon, when the remains of Mrs. Crandall as "chairman of the executive committee of the democratic party," as he signed himself. Amie Hamlink Schneider, the second victim of the Q street shooting, were laid away at rest at Oak Hill cemetery.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock at the resilence of Col. Hamlink, 1733 Q street. It was intended that the services should be as nearly private as possible, for the family had expressed a wish that only the relatives and near friends should be admitted. This was a difficult rule to enforce and the young gentlemen who stood at the door had a very hard time indeed. Outside the house were gathered hundreds of people, anxious to see all that could be seen, and scores of women, many of them utter strangers, but impelled by morbid curiosity, sought admission. them became quite indignant when this was politely refused.

Care for Her Child. Mrs. D. W. Russell, whose husband yesterday bducted their little girl from the steps of the residence of Mr. Gibson, the father of Mrs. Russell, an account of which will be found elsewhere in THE STAR, this morning took counsel of Messrs. Ralston and Siddons, and the first move was made in the preparation of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus for the child, which was presented to Judge Montgomery today. The petition states that she was married May 9, 1888, and she has two children, one of three years and one of twelve months; that prior to February 8 her husband treated her care of her and the children. She therefore prays a writ of habeas corpus.

The writ was ordered to issue by Justice offsets.

This single-track road with only a few cars would only be in the way on such a day as the encangment would set aside to visit Arlington. Then, to appreciate the trip to Arlington, it must be made over the military road. This gives a beautiful view and a most favorable impression of Washington. How can the G. A. R. take this magnificent drive if the road is to be obstructed and the horses frightened by these electric cars? If this-use of the bridge is permitted some one will be killed during the encampment. The railings of the bridge are so frail that a frightened horse could plunge directly into the river with whatever might be attached to him. Then there is a question as to the strength of the bridge to sustain the extra weight. If, however, the bridge is to be thus used the bond to vacate and to build at the Three Sisters should be given by all means. Baltimore Markets.
